FATHER OF THE FAIR

HOW M. H. DE YOUNG ORIGINATED THE CALIFORNIA EXPOSITION.

He conceived the plan at Chicago and with the assistance of other enterprising Californians has made a prodigious success of the Midwinter Fair.

The pronounced artistic and financial success of the California Midwinter exposition is the cap-sheaf of many marvels. No one appears to have expected it in such measure or so soon. Nor is it any qualified or half way success that has been achieved, but a thorough-paced triumph of the first order and measured by the highest standards. It seems as if some irresistible impulse moved every one who writes of the Midwinter fair to compare it with the Columbian exposition. This appears unfair, for the Midwinter made no pretense of rivaling its Chicago predecessor. It loses nothing by the comparison, however, and competent critics, making due allowance for the difference in scope, have declared that California's Sunset City is far more deliciously beautiful than was the magnificently beautiful White City by the lake front or the last exposition at Paris.

These two, be it noted, are the only two exhibitions ever held that surpass the Midwinter in size. It ranks third among the international expositions and is much more complete and beautiful as it is larger than any of its prototypes except those at Chicago and Paris. It has no less than 80 buildings, besides 100 mosaics and lodges, and they are as recent as the Midwinter.
